Noon in Veterans Memorial Park

Setting a price on carbon (to set the stage for stopping the burning of fossil fuels) is the most important environmental goal we can have – and it gets little real consideration in the halls of Congress. Grassroots action is needed to build a large movement to support major conservation, wind, solar and geothermal energy initiatives. By stopping the subsidies for coal and oil we make a great start, so that money can be made available to develop and deploy renewable energy sources and to make energy conservation a major priority.

On the Saturday after Mothers Day we will gather at Noon, join with the people of the Mothers and Others Walk for Clean Energy, and the Students March for Clean Energy, for a picture of all those who want clean energy, oppose the burning of fossil fuels and who support a sane energy policy. Join us just north of Veterans Bridge – bring your family, bring your friends. Help us get on the right energy course.
